7, No. 908, Hongkong, 10th November, 1876.

Inquirer and Commercial News of September gives the following:—By the last 22 years he has resided in Palestine, directing works of construction. According to the Greek Catholics, who are the majority of the country, in his military excursions, he has seen with grief the progress of events, very few of which he is bound to confess, have been of advantage to the Christians, and that, for the want of material resources. Notwithstanding some partial results Orthodox have attained, they are, however, always inferior to the plans of the Greek Catholic authorities (Russians, Greeks, Armenians) and by the Protestant missionaries. The first three have built a number of convents, hospitals, and other ecclesiastical edifices; the latter have opened schools, orphan asylums, and hospitals, and founded colonies which are prospering and acquiring a large extension of ground. "Among the Greek Catholics," says the author, "continually passing through Palestine, carrying material aid to their co-religionists, thousands of Russians, Greeks, and Armenians visit the most famous of the Protestant houses, and return respectively converts. This remarkable movement, he continues, has been especially manifest since 1854, and we can affirm that Catholicism, which until recently was confined in Syria and Mesopotamia to its original place, and legitimate character without the succour of its brethren throughout the universe—who are therefore urgently entreated to come to the assistance of their fellow Christians." "To attain the desired end and according to the Catholic Church continual and abundant means it is necessary to organize permanent works, such as hospitals, orphan asylums, and schools for themselves, and whose free income will serve to afford the missions, build churches, found schools, orphan asylums, and hospitals, and open up new colonies, and thus bring back to the Catholic Church, for the sake of her own prosperity, has at last made an alliance with modern progress, and that in the very birthplace of the Christian religion."
